Looking at the present political dynamics of the South, it is very clear that the Janatha Vimukthi Peramuna (JVP) is the most qualified political force in the South capable of representing in the parliament the ideals of the revolution that was triggered on 8th January 2015. These Ideals could be reduced to four fundamental themes, namely “good governance, democratization, ethno-religious reconciliation and social justice”.

In general, the political elite of Sri Lanka is a highly corrupted entity. These corrupt practices are not restricted to individual members of political parties but are systemic. These major parties are compelled to support the corrupt practices that are deeply entrenched in the system. What is clear is that there seems to be no conscious and effective efforts from the part of the major political parties to overcome this corrupt system. Fixing the corruption in the political system requires far more than rhetoric on corruption which is basically what the major political parties are currently doing. In this context, we need a reliable agency to function as an effective counterforce to challenge this corrupt system. The JVP is certainly the best candidate for this formidable task.

We expect this task from the JVP not by forming its own government or being a coalition partner of the government formed by one of the two major parties. But we expect the JVP to perform this task by forming an effective parliamentary opposition, an opposition that can give voice to people's aspirations that are embedded in the above mentioned four ideals.

Usually, people vote at elections to form governments. However, in this instance, we propose to vote at the election to form an effective and reliable opposition. We propose to vote for a party which is willing to remain in the opposition in order to raise its voice in the parliament on behalf of the above mentioned ideals, without resorting to various tactics of manipulating the system for narrow and individual gains.

JVP is well placed to perform this task. We invite you to be a part of this new political thinking which is aimed at electing a reliable and effective opposition in the next election.

Elect a reliable and effective opposition!!!
