What Volume 2 of Public Writings on Sri Lanka (2013) stated, can be repeated here: "Contrary to promise and much-cherished hope, the end of the war against the Tamil Tigers has not yet ushered in an age of justice, peace and prosperity for all.

On the premise that politics is far too important to be left entirely to politicians; that others have a duty and a moral obligation to take an interest" Sarvan offers this selection.

About the Author

Charles Ponnuthurai Sarvan's specialisation was African, British and Commonwealth literature in English. (His Sri Lanka Essays & Sketches appeared in 2011.) Having taught at various universities, now retired, he lives in Germany with his German-born wife, a published poet; his two sons and grandchildren.
